

ORL Course MCQ Test Example

- The most prominent symptom of acute Otitis Media

- a. Pain
- b. Hearing Loss
- c. Tinnitus
- d. Discharge
- e. None of the above

Answer: A

- The advised initial procedure for a 50-year-old man who presented with lateral neck swelling, is:

- a. block neck dissection
- b. fine needle aspiration
- c. incisional biopsy
- d. excisional biopsy
- e. do nothing

Answer: B

- All the following are absolute indications for tonsillectomy except:

- a. Unilateral tonsillar enlargement with suspicion of malignancy
- b. Cervical lymphadenitis not responding to antibiotic treatment
- c. Obstructive airway disease with right sided heart failure
- d. Recurrent febrile convulsions with documented attacks of tonsillitis
- e. Spontaneous tonsillar haemorrhage not responding to antibiotics

Answer: B

- Fetid unilateral nasal discharge in childhood is commonly caused by:

- a. Atrophic rhinitis
- b. Adenoids
- c. Foreign body (neglected)
- d. Choanal atresia
- e. None of the above

Answer: C

- What is the most common bacterial cause of acute tonsillitis?

- a. Staphylococcus aureus.
- b. Haemophilus influenza.
- c. Streptococcus pyogenes.
- d. Neisseria gonorrhoeae.

Answer: C (other name for GABHS)

- What is/are the management options of a patient that developed suppurative complications of tonsillitis?
 - a. Airway protection and monitoring.
 - b. Intravenous antibiotics.
 - c. Incision and drainage of the abscess if present.
 - d. All of the above.

Answer: D

- What is Lemierre's syndrome?
 - a. Subacute Necrotizing Encephalomyelopathy.
 - b. Thrombophlebitis of the internal jugular vein.
 - c. A congenital disorder.
 - d. A complication of tonsillectomy.

Answer: B